INSIDE

A million miles of pride
Schneider drivers rewarded for safe driving create a decal to let everyone know who really rules the road. A-8

Scientists grow heart valves in test tubes
ATLANTA — In search of better open paths, scientists for the first time have grown heart valves from scratch in a test tube, then shown that they work like nature's own — at least in animals, researchers said Sunday.

"We're such a better team than we were a year ago, but we can't get to the playoffs." — Tight end Jeff Thompson

What's next
The Packers (14-1) seem to have the edge in their quest to reach the playoffs. They need a game that should be a win for both teams' postseason hopes.

It's an angry after loss, they threaten

BEARS 14, PACKERS 13

Bears block comeback

Highlights
With his 17th straight start, the Packers' Brett Favre was in the mood for Sunday's 14-13 victory, breaking the old mark set by Philadelphia's Dan Marino. Favre, an analyst for ESPN, was on hand for the game and gave Favre a hug on the field after the game was stopped after the first snap. Things went downhill from there.

Lowlights
Chicago's Bryan Robinson swatted away Ryan Longwell's game-winning field goal attempt as time expired, giving the Bears their first win over the Packers since 1963, a streak of 36 straight losses.
