

Green Bay Press-Gazette

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1999 SERVING AN ALL-AMERICA CITY www.greenbaypressgazette.com 50 CENTS

Injuries plague Packers offense

Tight end Mark Chmura is already out, and right tackle Earl Dotson may need surgery on his back. C-1

Next education-reform steps coming this week

Thompson will join in third summit

Leaders will gather this week to try to breathe new life into the 10-year-old education reform movement.

Thirty governors — including Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson — and as many top business and education leaders meet in Fall Lake, N.Y., Thursday through Saturday to agree on the next steps to take to reform public schools.

This is the third in a series of summits that began in 1989, when the governors met in Charlottesville, Va., to set goals for the year 2000.

Gov. Thompson and his cabinet members will be in the lead, but they have been slow to move on education reform. Currently, nearly every state has education standards and graduation rates, but the end of offering the best science and math instruction in the world remains far away.

In the second summit, held in 1996, governors and business leaders agreed that setting state-by-state standards was the best path to follow.

Currently, nearly every state has education standards and graduation rates, but the end of offering the best science and math instruction in the world remains far away.

Favre family talks food, not football

Relatives of the Green Bay Packers quarterback launch their cookbook. D-1

Cloned cows to be displayed at expo

Relatives of the Green Bay Packers quarterback launch their cookbook. D-1

National panel on PCBs focuses on Fox dredging

An aerial view pinpoints a pilot dredging project to remove PCBs from the Fox River near the Fort James Corp. West pond. A national panel is holding hearings in Green Bay on how PCBs should be handled nationwide. The panel is studying the human and ecological risks associated with various cleanup approaches, including dredging.

Woman strangled, police say

Student also was beaten before man took own life

By ANN NELESEN Press-Gazette

Police said Monday that a woman was strangled and a student was beaten before a man took his own life in a case that police believe is a homicide.

The woman, 25, had been strangled and the student, 19, had been beaten before the man, 25, shot himself in the chest in the back of his garage.

"She was a young woman, and he used her name," Lt. Jim Hines said.

Police said Monday that both Miles and Katherine Majewski in his Western Avenue apartment Friday by killing her he was going to pay back money he owed her.

Instead, police believe, Miles, 25, had strangled her, having the body of the University of Wisconsin student in the back of his garage.

"She was a young woman, and he used her name," Lt. Jim Hines said.

Majewski Miles owed victim money

State regulators absent from Monday meeting

By SEAN CAMPBELL Press-Gazette

Associated with various PCB cleanup approaches — among them dredging, capping and natural recovery.

Presentations Monday included a discussion on what was characterized as the use of dredging to remove PCBs from the river, and a presentation on the use of dredging to remove PCBs from the river, and a presentation on the use of dredging to remove PCBs from the river.

Indian museum construction begins

Last National Mall site will honor history of Native Americans

Leaders and shaped to evolve the site and reconstruct rock formations of the American West — a project to contrast sharply with the Creek Revival, modern and Victorian buildings in the American Indian on the last.

The $130 million, 270,000-square-foot building will be on a 4-acre site between the Capitol and the National Air and Space Museum, and it will be the largest building in the city.

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Weather

55	55
48	48
INDEX	INDEX

Indian museum construction begins

A sketch of the National Museum of American Indians, which will occupy the last site on the National Mall in Washington, D.C. The museum will contain American Indian artifacts from the Smithsonian Institution.

Indian museum construction begins

Last National Mall site will honor history of Native Americans

Leaders and shaped to evolve the site and reconstruct rock formations of the American West — a project to contrast sharply with the Creek Revival, modern and Victorian buildings in the American Indian on the last.

The $130 million, 270,000-square-foot building will be on a 4-acre site between the Capitol and the National Air and Space Museum, and it will be the largest building in the city.

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

Replicans in Congress struggling to finish spending bills

