BROWN COUNTY

Maloney hearing for retrial No. 2

Green Bay police officer John Maloney will have a hearing Tuesday, Nov. 2, on his bid to reopen the case in his wife's death.

Maloney, 45, an arson detective, was convicted in February of killing his wife and setting fire to her body and home.

The body of Sandra Maloney, 40, was found by her mother on Feb. 11, 1996, in the fire-damaged home on High Street.

The hearing will be before Brown County Judge Peter Nien, who could grant a new trial, modify the sentence or let the conviction stand.

Maloney is serving a life term in prison and would be eligible for parole next fall.

OCONTO COUNTY

80-year-old man killed in crash

Donald Carlson, 80, of Peshigo, was killed Tuesday when his 1995 sedan crossed the southbound lanes of U.S. 41-141 and another vehicle struck him.

His passenger, Alice Polzin, 81, Peshigo, was taken to St. Vincent Hospital in Green Bay where she was in critical condition this morning.

The car was leaving a restaurant on Heintze Lane in the town of Adams when it crossed with a southbound vehicle driven by Joseph Baransk, 38, of Oconto.

Baransk and his passenger, Julie Novak, 41, Coleman, were treated at the hospital for minor injuries and then released.

Field to be named after former coach

The Wrightstown School District will dedicate its football field Friday in honor of former coach Tom Maki, who died in May after battling leukemia.

The school board recently approved "Tom Maki Memorial Football Field" in honor of Maki, who coached high school football for 28 years and taught science at Wrightstown High School for 28 years.

The dedication will take place during the school's homecoming football game.

Panel wraps up PCB hearing

It criticizes lack of choices for cleanup

By STEVE CAMPBELL

A national science panel studying the technologies available for PCB cleanups leaves Green Bay having drawn some insights into where the cleanup making process could be improved.

The National Research Council's Committee on Remediation of PCB Contaminated Sediments on Tuesday wrapped up a two-day visit that included a boat tour of the Fox River and ten public hearings at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay. The scientific panel has been charged by Congress and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to study PCB cleanup methods and develop guidelines for how such cleanups should be handled nationwide for the next 10 years.

The committee expects to issue its findings before the end of 2000, said Roberto Noyes, project director for the NRC — the operating arm of the National Academies. "When they take home from this it gives them lots to think about, and it gives them an idea of where they should be looking for further information," she said. "They need time to digest what they've learned, and I think they found this very productive."

The 14-member panel, which included at least eight hours of presentations from the public and various parties involved in the Fox River PCB cleanup, appeared to spot some potential short-comings in the decision-making process for the river's contamination. At both hearings, panelists sought to determine whether the EPA employs a systematic approach to monitoring cleanups before or after a particular cleanup method is used in order to judge its effectiveness.

"The issue right now is there's not a systematic approach, and I think that came out at the meeting last night," Noyes said. "They don't spend two years before they put a technology in place, increasingly, to determine what all the baseline values are."

Committee member Steve Hensel, associate professor of geology at Michigan State University, was disappointed that only two options were presented at the hearings: dredging, and a process known as natural recovery — or leaving a water body to clean itself.

"There was a large lack of other options presented," she said. "I feel like people are walking around with blinders on."

The presentations reflected the standoff that exists concerning the Fox River cleanup today. On one side, the seven paper mills hold responsible for addressing the river's contamination after natural recovery; on the other, the EPA and state Department of Natural Resources favor a remedy that

Suspect in Outagamie rape case hangs self

APPLETON — A man accused of hanging a convicted incest store clerk during a Grand Chute crime spree hanged himself early Tuesday in Outagamie County Jail.

Joseph Melton, 31, died of asphyxia after trying a bed sheet over his head in the jail cell. He was charged with first-degree murder, sexual intercourse with a minor, and carrying a dangerous weapon.

Melton was arrested on Tuesday morning after a woman reported seeing him in a restaurant on Heintze Lane in the town of Adams when it crossed with a southbound vehicle driven by Joseph Baransk, 38, of Oconto.

Baransk and his passenger, Julie Novak, 41, Coleman, were treated at the hospital for minor injuries and then released.

Oconto County Sheriff's Department deputies hand over a suspect to officers from the Green Bay Police Department Tuesday afternoon in Oconto County. Green Bay police had searched for the man at a west side house, but he had gone to Oconto County.

Suspect eludes SWAT team, police

Man found in Oconto County

By ANNE MALONE

Police surrounded the house and wanted for SWAT team members to take up positions around the house before something went wrong.

Police responded to a call in the 1400 block of 14th Avenue at about 2:30 p.m. looking for a 30-year-old Green Bay man thought to be wanted. Police had gotten a call from the man's brother who claimed to have heard a shot fired while talking to the man on the phone.

The suspect was found at a gas station on U.S. 41 in Oconto County, where he was taken into custody. He was taken to the Oconto County Mental Health Center for evaluation, and then said police expect to seek criminal charges of endangering safety by reckless use of a weapon.

Officers who searched the house where the man was thought to be found evidence of a shot being fired in the house, Sheriff said. The house belonged to a friend of the man.

Neighbors near 14th Avenue and Eighth Street were told to go into their basements while the SWAT team worked to resolve the situation.

Conviction against teen father is upheld

Jury entitled to hear about prior abuse

By ANNE MALONE

WASKEG — A Green Bay man convicted of second-degree sexual intercourse with a minor in a domestic violence case Tuesday to get a new trial.

The first District Court of Appeals upheld the first-degree conviction for Matthew Gray on the Feb. 15, 1997, death of his son, Matthew Jr., at Crossroads Hospital near Green Bay.

Gray was 18 at the time and had two other children.

Prosecutors contended Gray forced his son to have sex with him by force, and that Gray forced his son to have sex with him by force.

Gray's lawyer argued that Gray was not a minor at the time of the crime and that Gray was not a minor at the time of the crime.

The appeals court said the jury was entitled to hear the evidence because the alleged abuse had occurred just six months before the boy died.

Gray claimed the boy's death was accidental. But, the court said, the evidence showed Gray had intended to harm the child, the three-judge panel said.

Gray, who was sentenced to life in prison with no eligibility for parole for at least 20 years, told investigators he got "really mad" at his crying son and shoved a bottle of milk into his mouth, court records said.

"I was spanking the milk into his mouth. I thought he got scared and laid there and would never move," Gray said.

At the time, the child's mother was outside the shelter smoking a cigarette.

MANTONOC COUNTY Reedville man 'fair' after car hit by train

A Reedville man is in for court action at Mantonoc County Medical Center after a train locomotive hit his car as it drove about 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Inspector Kim Peterson of the Mantonoc County Sheriff's Department said Steven Mack, 37, of Reedville was driving south on County CS in the town of Mantonoc, Wis., when he drove into the path of a westbound Watco Central train.

The train was traveling at about 20 mph, Peterson said. The impact of the crash caused the car's door to be mangled in the train's engine. The car was pushed off the tracks shortly after impact and the road was straight and level and the train had stopped before the crash.

Peterson said Mack was not injured.

SEYMOUR Pickup truck, van collide; two injured

A 20-year-old Seymour man was injured when his 1987 Chevrolet pickup truck collided with a van on Wisconsin 50 in the town of Seymour at about 4 p.m. Tuesday.

The Seymour man was flown from the crash at Shady Road by State II helicopter to St. Vincent Hospital in Green Bay where he was listed in critical, but stable, condition, according to nursing supervisors there.

A 58-year-old Bondick man, who was enroute on St. Vincent by ambulance when he also was listed in critical, but stable, condition. Their names were not released Tuesday night.

Neither of the vehicles had passengers.

GREEN BAY One person shows up for school forum

The Green Bay school district canceled a public forum to discuss plans for East, West and Southeast high schools Tuesday night after only one person showed up.

The man who came a former district employee who was arrested when South was being built, was given an individual look at the plans and a chance to ask questions.

But Assistant Superintendent Daniel Nersad said there was no need to go through the same hour session that had been proposed for East and West earlier this month.

Those sessions also were separately attended.

The forum had included presentations on preliminary plans for renovations and additions of the three schools. The work is estimated at $16.5 million, he said in a Tuesday, Feb. 12, note to school.

A final forum — to discuss plans for West only — is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday at West, 900 Shawano Ave.

BROWN COUNTY Forum closes on crime, punishment

Myth and reality of the criminal justice system will be discussed at a public forum Thursday at the Redwood Inn in Ashwaubenon.

"Crime and punishment are topics that concern everyone," said State Public Defender Nick Chalko.

A panel of community leaders will discuss the issues from several points of view and try to sort out what's real from what's not, he said.

"Crime and Punishment: Reality vs. Myth" will be from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Redwood Inn auditorium at 800 Airport Drive.

Panel members include:

- Brown County Judge Michael Green
- Green Bay Police Chief James Lewis
- Brown County Assistant District Attorney Dennis Strong Hill
- Brown County Executive Assistant Paul Verbecht
- Department of Corrections Secretary Jim Litchner
- State Public Defender Nick Chalko

The forum is part of the 1998 National Training Conference for Criminal Justice and Community Leaders.

Notre Dame students labor outside class

Students worked at nonprofit groups for a half day Tuesday after a day off from school. The service day replaced a mid-week class that students previously held as a fund-raiser.

"This is more interactive than having kids with lectures on their feet," said Beth Shandy, Notre Dame's director of service.

"They're doing something that serves others," Shandy said.

Ashwaubenon ordinance defines home occupations

Home occupations that won't be accepted include auto and truck sales and repair, welding or metal working shops, restaurants, motor shops and heating or air conditioning businesses.

Norbert Sal, 2715 Timber Lane, said some of the language of the ordinance needs to be clarified.

"What does 'retail occupation' mean?" he asked. "Can you make $1 a month or do you have to make a couple hundred?" There's a lot of confusion here.

Assistant Village Administrator Steve Kubiak said the ordinance was drafted by Village Trustee Mark Kubiak, a former mayor, along with Village president Tom Tompkins, and the ordinance focuses on making sure the type of businesses that are not allowed rather than focusing on the specific activities or activities could have on a neighborhood.

"Metal working is not allowed but subcontracting is," Kubiak said. "I work with wood, and it can be just as noisy as working with metal."

PCB/Sport fishing big business

Lakes and their tributaries — with contaminated sediments — are the greatest source of chemical pollution to the lakes.

The public also had an opportunity to comment during the hearing on Monday. "That hearing was a good exercise at WISD with about 30 years of experience regarding the bay, and the best thing is that the bay is not dead," said Tom Tompkins.

"The real issue here is this is a strictly commercial system, and that's what gives me concern about natural recovery," he said.

Harris said natural recovery's dependence upon continued sediment erosion from within the watershed to bury PCBs in the freshwater is inconsistent with calls for a 90 percent to 75 percent reduction in sediment loading to the system.

The current rate of soil loss is not sustainable, he said, not that the soil and nutrients that run off the land into the Fox River and Green Bay have been identified as two primary sources to the water.

Thompson lifts restrictions to aid hay shipments East

Thompson signed an executive order suspending the overtime truck load restrictions to allow for shipments of some of Wisconsin's recent hay crop.

About 200 trucks are due to arrive in Wisconsin in the next three weeks to pick up the hay and take it to farmers in the East.
